Riehen, a village of international standing.

Surrounded by a diverse landscape of green meadows, lush forests and fertile vineyards Riehen offers more culture than most places. The famous Fondation Beyeler inspires hundreds of thousands of art enthusiasts every year with its first-class exhibitions. In the Kunst Raum Riehen and numerous other galleries and artists' workshops you get an impression of the current state of contemporary art. Thanks also to the important designs by renowned architects such as Renzo Piano and Herzog & de Meuron the community in the Lower Wiese Valley is a cultural meeting point with an urban atmosphere.

At the same time and despite its population of more than 20,000, Riehen has maintained the characteristics of a village. The tallest building to this day is the tower of the village church, once the core of a fortress church.

Riehen offers something for everyone: art appreciation and hospitality, exploration of its historical village centre, recreation in nature and countless cultural and leisure activities to suit every taste. Immerse yourself in an oasis of cultured living, there is so much to discover!

An art institution of international renown: the Fondation Beyeler.

The region's playing field: leisure activities at the Wiese Park.

Playful exploration: the Riehen Toy Museum.

Culture and art at every turn.

Riehen is located in a dynamic cultural landscape between the centres of Basel (CH), Lörrach and Weil am Rhein (both D). The international art scene is as much a part of Riehen as its regional culture. Classical music and jazz have their place here as do rock and pop music. A particular highlight for art lovers is the Fondation Beyeler (11), which is internationally renowned thanks to its prestigious collection, exclusive exhibitions and exciting events.

Architecture, art and nature are combined here to offer a unique overall experience. Another attraction that is known beyond the region is the Toy Museum in the historical Wettstein House (5).

Nature and recreation at your convenience.

Glorious parks (15–18) not only invite you to take a relaxing stroll and to linger for a while, but are also a magnificent setting for numerous leisure activities as well as cultural and social events. The Wiese landscape park extends beyond the community boundaries and is the largest area of recreation in the Basel agglomeration. Parts of the public areas are still used for farming which contributes to the special mix of urban and rural lifestyles. The Naturbad Riehen (19), an unconventional swimming pool, has been inaugurated in 2014 and goes back to the simplicity of bathing. The idyllic bath in a landscape park has been designed by the star architects Herzog & de Meuron.

Where village and city meet.

From the Romans to the Basel patricians: various eras have left behind their traces in Riehen. Besides the prominent village church (1), the historical farm houses and the elegant country estates of distinguished Basel citizens (5–10), modern residential and commercial buildings have been erected in recent times, which have turned Riehen into a versatile village with an urban atmosphere. You will encounter a lively centre with shops, workshops, restaurants and cafés. At the same time Riehen is ideally linked with its surrounding communities and nearby towns both by road and public transport, making it a part of a diverse tri-national living environment.

Where history is the future.

Those seeking recreation in nature or have a fondness for exploring historical village centres will find an ideal location in Riehen, as will discerning lovers of art and architecture. The community is rooted in the past while at the same time being excellently prepared for the future: Riehen operates the biggest geothermal energy heating system in Switzerland and actively promotes ecological sustainability. In 2004 Riehen was the first community to be awarded the «European Energy Award Gold» for its energy policies. The community also actively engages in family and youth politics and since 2011 has become the proud carrier of the Unicef «Child Friendly Community» label. May Riehen remain a place worth loving and living in.
